TIP

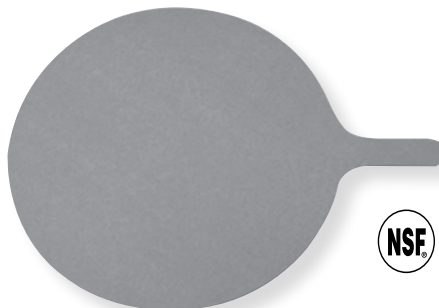

Caring For Wood Peels

Wood pizza peels should never be soaked in water. If necessary they can be seasoned or sealed with oil. To seal wipe surface with any foodsafe oil (like mineral oil). Avoid leaving on hot surfaces, which could increase chance of warping. If peel warps, leave overnight with warp facing up and it should flatten out.

TIP

How to Prepare a Perfect Crust

Pizza crusts, especially thin crusts, need to be docked to control bubble formation and blistering during baking. After working dough with a dough cutter, spread onto pan and use a dough docker to prick the pie all through the center, avoiding the edge. This will produce an evenly baked crust and keep the pie from inflating while cooking.

TIP

Baking and Decorating

- In the summer keep flour in the refrigerator to deter bugs and the effects of high humidity.
- Use a small kitchen scale for weighing out baking ingredients. It's more accurate and easier than packing brown sugar into a measuring cup or scraping shortening out.
- Simplify cleanup when baking by measuring and assembling dry ingredients on inexpensive paper plates. Next, shape the paper plate into a scoop and add the dry ingredients to the mixture as needed.
- When frosting cakes, always anchor the bottom layer to the cake stand with a small portion of frosting. This way, the cake won't slide about as you frost. This technique works for individual pastries, too.

TIP

Using the Ice-Point Method to Calibrate a Thermometer

Thermometers should be calibrated regularly to make sure that the readings are correct. The ice-point method is the most widely used method to calibrate a thermometer.

1. Fill a large container with crushed ice. Add clean tap water until the container is full.
2. Put the thermometer stem or probe into the ice water so that the sensing area is completely submerged. Wait thirty seconds after the needle stops moving.
3. Hold the adjusting nut securely with a wrench or other tool and rotate the head of the thermometer until it reads 32°F (0°C).

TIP

Portion Control

- Portion control is the key to profit control. Using a sandwich shop/deli as an example, if an employee serves 1/4 ounce over weight with each serving of sandwich meat and 400 customers are served in a day, 6 1/4 pounds of additional food has been used. If the product costs $1.50 per pound, the loss over the year would be over $3,420!
- Weigh all ingredients in a recipe to ensure accurate measurements.

HACCP

Food Storage/Cross Contamination/Hygiene

Food Storage

Always check product quality and temperature upon receipt and store quickly in the proper storage container, without rinsing. Practice first-in/first-out rotation by marking containers with date stored.

Cross Contamination

To assure cross contamination does not occur from one food to another, assign specific utensils to specific foods. Also have containers that are strictly for ice transportation.

Hand Sink

Proper Handwashing Procedure

Employees Must Wash Hands Before Returning to Work

Hygiene

Prevent cross contamination from employee to food. Correct hand washing procedures can reduce up to 80% of all food borne illnesses. Gloves are essential.

HACCP needs!

Temperature

One factor that can directly cause food to become unsafe is Time-and-Temperature Abuse. Food has been time-temperature abused any time it has been allowed to remain in the temperature danger zone. You are in the danger zone whenever the temperature of a potentially hazardous food falls between 41°F and 140°F/5°C and 60°C. Foods cannot remain for more than four hours in that dangerous range.

Bacterial Guidelines

Meat products are extremely perishable and the temperature of meat storage and cookery has an especially critical role in the microbiological safety of meat products. The "Nampometer" illustrates the important relationship between temperature and meat product bacterial growth.

Temperature/Safety/Sanitation

Safety

Proper safety precautions, protective wear and equipment are essential to reducing injuries to employees and customers alike. Standards must be set to ensure that employees, patrons and your business reputation are protected.

Sanitation

To meet today's health standards, kitchens require more than a mopping to be clean. A sanitary operation is free of harmful levels of contaminants. Sanitation in the kitchen is an indispensable weapon against the germs that can make your customers and employees sick. Make sure all work surfaces are cleaned with the appropriate detergents and sanitizers between uses, particularly when preparing raw and cooked foods.

TIP

How to Use Gloves Properly

Some establishments use gloves to minimize bare-hand contact with ready-to-eat food. If you use gloves, always wash your hands before putting them on and when changing to a fresh pair. Gloves should be changed:

- When they become dirty or torn
- Before starting a different task
- After handling raw meat and before handling cooked or ready-to-eat food
- If you have a cut or sore, make sure to cover it with a clean bandage. If it is a hand cut, then cover the bandage with a glove or finger cot. This will protect the bandage and keep it from falling off into food.

TIP

Sanitizing Kitchens

Operators must know the difference between cleaning and sanitizing. Cleaning is always required; it is effective when water and detergent are used to remove soil from a surface, such as a plate or workstation. Sanitizing is performed with a chemical and water mixture after a surface is cleaned; not all surfaces must be sanitized. Sanitizing is the reduction of microorganisms on a clean surface.
